Judgment Notes

Content is accurate, well-organized, and consistently matches the authoritative/expert tone -- the two back-to-back guideline-intro H2s ("Follow the Guidelines of the Google Merchant Centre" / "Google Merchant Center guidelines") successfully read as distinct, which was a specific risk the brief flagged. The main issue: nearly every one of the 21 sections leans on an em-dash aside ("--") at least once, which becomes a repetitive structural pattern across the full piece and reads a bit mechanical by the middle of the article; combined with the 36.7-word average sentence length (Flesch 23.7, very difficult), a human editor would likely tighten a portion of these sentences for rhythm and vary the aside construction without losing any substance.
